JUICY FRUIT GUM
PRESENTS
HAVE FUN SAFELY

DON'T GET HURT

NEVER dive until you've checked with a long pole for depth, hidden rocks or logs.
NEVER swim when tired, overcasted or chilled.

NEVER swim where there's a fast current or undertow.

NEVER drink or rough-house anyone in the water.

NEVER swim after eating a big meal.

BE SMART-PLAY SAFE

ALWAYS stay reasonably close to the shore.
ALWAYS swim where there's a lifeguard, if possible.

ALWAYS swim with a "buddy."

ALWAYS "test it" when the water is cold, instead of jumping or diving in.

ALWAYS dry off with a towel when you come out of the water.

HERE'S ANOTHER SMART IDEA...

Juicy Fruit Gum has lots of delicious flavor—
and it won't spoil your appetite.

Ask your Mom to bring some home.

The Silver PAYOFF

COVER ART: BOB DE WINTER, ILLUSTRATION BY JOHN COE

Sherril Stensell and Hank Stensse walked glumly into the office at the Five Star Mine.

Bob Walker, the young owner of the mine, was waiting for them. "Did they get it again?" he asked, apprehensively.

The sheriff nodded slowly. "They jumped us in Folsom Canyon."

"As a special guard, I seem to be a wash-out," Stensse said in a dejected tone. "This is the third time in three months that your silver has been hijacked on the way from the mine into town."

"There's a leak somewhere," the sheriff murmured wearily. "Somebody tips them off whenever a shipment is ready."

And that trail is so rugged that they all ways get the drop on us," Stensse complained. "Then each holding man grabs a few bars of silver and takes off, leaving us with an empty wagon."

"That's it!" Bob exclaimed. "We're making a error in time by waiting the silver into town!" Then a smile crossed his face. "I'll cut the next shipment into one solid chunk. Let's see them carry that off!"

Four weeks later a freight wagon slowly waded through a narrow gully on the trail from the Five Star Mine toward town. A dull metal cube, three feet square, lay in the wagon bed. A dozen miners rode ahead, and a dozen more guarded the rear. Sherril Stensell and Bob Walker rode beside the wagon.

"Too bad Stensse had to go out of town," the sheriff remarked. "We'll need every man if they try another holdup."

Just then a voice rang out, "HOLD IT! Don't anybody move!"

The wagon ground to a halt. The guards looked up to see a row of rifles pointed out over the rim on both sides of the gully.

Surrounding the trap, Bob Walker called out. "Don't try anything, now! We'll be out down in no time — guaranteed!"

A masked outlaw stretched down the steep bank. Hearing the wagon, he stooped the driver from the seat and turned the team and wagon up as sweeps that led into the gully from higher up the mountain. Soon the wagon and its load of silver disappeared from sight.

"How get spring?" the voice called again. "And don't try to follow us!"

"We are going after them, Sheriff," Bob said. "One man would hold that narrow arroyo against an army — we're head equal!"

An hour later the mine's road into town. But pulled his horse to a stop, then called to his foreman. "Tear the men on to the bank (we'll see you later)"

"Why are they going there?" the sheriff asked as the men galloped on.

"The boys are going to bank the silver," Bob explained with a grin. "We built a heavy box and covered it with a thin layer of low grade silver. That's what the outlaws get!" He smiled at the sheriff's amazement. "The rest of the silver was cast in regular bars and my men had them in their saddlebags all the time!"

Just then Hank Stensse rode up and dismounted. "That was a neat trick, Walker!" he said admiringly. "I'll bet those outlaws will never get over, finding out they stole an empty box instead of silver!"

"How did you know about the silver?" Bob asked coolly.

"Why — oh — your men told me," Stensse said.

"They're at the bank. You just rode in from the other direction," Bob retorted.

Stensse glared at Bob, then his nerve broke and he turned to run, but Bob quickly swung him with a blow and sent him sprawling to the ground.

"There's the man who's been tipping off the outlaws, Sheriff!" Bob said and added with a grin. "I suggest you let me make a set of silver handcuffs to use on him. He should get some silver for his trouble!"

Monarch of the Mountains

ILLUSTRATION BY JIMMY HARRIS

Silvertip the Grizzly was born in mid-February, deep in a rocky den, surrounded by the Medicine Range of the Rocky Mountains. Usually grizzly cubs are born in pairs, but he was an only cub. At birth, Silvertip was hairless and pink and smaller than a gray squirrel.

Compared to his mother's great five hundred pound size, a grizzly cub is one of the smallest of animals at birth — weighing only ten ounces. Nature has a good reason for making the newborn cub so tiny. Mother Grizzly is hibernating when her cubs are born and neither cubs nor drinks — so she is not able to provide enough nourishment for big, frothy cubs.

The warm sun of late spring melted the snow and warmed the earth before Mother Grizzly led her cub from the den into the fresh, clean mountain world. . . Silvertip then weighed almost ten pounds and was a trifle larger than a rabbit.

The outside world is an interesting place to silver-tips. He shuffles along close to his mother, imitating everything she does. When she feeds hungrily upon the fresh spring grass, he eagerly tries a mouthful...

But this kind of food is not to his liking, and he hastily abandons such a diet in favor of a richer one—his customary drink of mother's milk.

Although grizzly bears eat almost anything, they are voracious eaters often than they are great eaters; for it is easier to satisfy a voracious appetite with wild berries, drafts, and game, than it is to dig for ground squirrels or other burrowing animals.

One day Silvertip sees, for the first time, a grown-up male grizzly, an enormous buff and brown giant. He is busily engaged digging for ground squirrels, and his claws measure three inches or more in length.

The big fellow ignores them—he has no concern for mothers and cubs.

Although he may live to be thirty years old, a male grizzly never takes an interest in his family.

Instead, the care and training of the cubs is left strictly to the mother.

She cares for them until the middle of the second summer after their birth.

By then the cubs are about eighteen months old and have learned enough to care for themselves—although they will not reach full size and weight until they are eight or ten years old.

Silvertip is still a bit afraid of the yearling cubs, and he stays close to his mother when they are nearby.

During his first summer, Silverpaw learns to rely on his skills not only with nuts, insects, grubs, burrowing animals, and fish caught by tooth and claw, as well as other foods that Mother Grizzly eats . . . for he must build toward the great strength and size that he will someday attain.

Of all the meat-eating animals, the grizzly bear is the largest in size.

The brown bear lives in North America.

These brown giants weigh up to 1,500 pounds, and can run as fast as a deer.

Grizzly bears are the largest of all bears.

The Dell Paperback is not always too short, a parent guarantee that the comic magazine bearing a red line inside always read a full-length comic magazine. The Dell can also automatically order this magazine, approximately monthly. That's why when you check this Dell Comic you can do one subscription only and see "how it goes" and "what it's like" and "only made and ordered good."

It gives you a good way to be in control of your money and books.
